of the brandy, which finished the bottle. As I was fixing the torch for the third time I heard a shout down the canon. I answered with all my might, and in a few minutes Jim Kelly and the doctor rode into the circle of the flaring light. "Alive," the doctor asked. "Alive, yee," said Jock; "alive and that's about all. He can't epeak." "What have you given him—brandy? That's right. How much?" "A bettleful." "What have you given him—brandy? That's right. How much?" "A bettleful." "Right, and you've kept him awake? That's it, He won't die, now. Wonderful fellows, these Greasers, He'd have died before this if he meant dying. Let's see the wound." The candle burned as quietly in the still air as in a room. The Mexican's foot was swollen, so that it scarcely looked like a human member; but in the midst of the purple swelling was a white circle with the little blue mark, plainly evident, for its centre. The Mexican seemed to feel no pain, even when the doctor handled the wound and pressed it upward with his fingers. "Hold the candle close," he said. "It's blamed strange," pecking at the little blue mark with his forceps; "the fang's in the wand yet. I never heard of that happening before. Shake him a bit; don't let him go drowsy."

His swollen limbs wobbled like jelly under the treatment. It was horrid.

under the treatment, it was horrid.

The doctor gave a little dig, and then a little ting with his foccus. Presently he held up to the candle, in the clutch of the forceps, a long white spine, and regarded it curiously.

on the pistol pocket at the hip.

After a while the awful distortion of Loule's face began to go down. "You can almost see it settling like a batter pudding," as Jim Kelly said; and the fearful purple tinge died out of it. His heart was beating naturally again, and the doctor said we might let him go to sleep.

hid dread of snakes for a long wheever since he had in hand the killing ever since he had to hand the killing of one six feet long down in the republic of Mexico; though after a couple of years on the ranch he had almost forgotten that there were such things. A man that is nervous about snakes should never go barefoot in the hills.

"It only shows what I told you," Jock Peters commented, "Strychnine is the thing for snake bite, because it is such a neve tonic. If a num could make believe he had not been bitten he need never die of snake bite. If ever I'm bitten I shall make believe it was a cactus spine."

This is a true story, although it is such a goed one. If anyone doubts it, he can see the thorn.—Macmillan's.

"I had a tired feeling and tried var lous medicines without obtaining any benefit. I began taking Hood's Sursa henerit. I began usung moon's sama-parilla and was very soon restored to good health. The fired feeling all left me before I had finished taking the contents of one bottle. I took three bot-tles in all and it made me feel like a dif-ferent person." Henry Kimler, Pey-tona, W. Va.

The beauty of the best snake story in Medical Book, written for Men Only. One copy may be had free on application. the world is that there was really no snake in it, which is more than can be sald even of the Garden of Eden.

It had been very hot that summer on the ranch. Men work in the fields of California with the thermometer at 110 degrees, while they fall down of heat apoplexy in the streets of New York and Chleago at 90 degrees. That is the maxim they preach to the stranger in the west, and it has truth in it; but it is a mistake to suppose that even in Califor-nia men work in the fields in confort in such a temperature; and that summer the thermometer had gone very near 115 the thermometer had gone very near 115 degrees. So we were grateful enough to get away into the hills for a spell, with a wagon and a tent and the usual outfit of pots and pans, three of us, white men, with Loule, the Mexican (whom we called, in the vernacular, the Grenser), to mind the horses and make himself generally useful. Our programme was to fish the civerz, shoot deer, and possibly a grizzly bear, discover a gold mine, and go back to the ranch with a prospective fortune.

We had just pitched our tent. Down on the plain for weeks before we had

We had just pitched our tent. Down on the plain for weeks before we had been sleeping out on the verandas, but the air of the hills had a nip in it by contrast. It was late in the afternoon, but there was still plenty of sunshine. I followed Louie round a shoulder of the bill, going to fetch water at a little distance from a stream tumbling from somewhere among the snowy peaks that capped the zone of firs on the great mountains above us. These mountains had, at some time or other, sent down a little avalanche of small rocks that lay heaped on our left as we walked. The scene was the most peaceful imaginable. In an instant a succession of small rockets sent the peace to limbo. Louie dropped his panniken with a thickling clatter, crying "Sancta Mariai" in a voice of terror. At the same time I heard the dread rattle of a snake, and saw its length glean under Louie's feet and vanish among the rocks. "Sancta Mariai" be tottered back into my arms, his dark face livid with fear.

remember," said Jock, "going along "I remember," said Jock, "going along tridge of a terrace on a steep river sank. The river was full of sharks, and met a brown snake coming along the idge townrds me. There wasn't room o turn, and I condan't take to the river or the sharks, and I hand't a gun, and may pal coming behind had a gun, and appoint the intriel in between my legs and blow the brute to bits."
"Is that true, Jock?" I asked.
"My heaven, d'you think I'd lie at uch a time as this?" with a glance at coule's face.

such a time as this?" with a glance at Louic's face.

"Are you getting sleepy, man?" he said; then, as Louis did not answer, he took him under the arm, and signaling me to do the same on the other side, we kept him moving between us up and down and round the tent. From time to time we made him drink more brandy. He had taken half a bottle, but it seemed to have no effect on him. "It stimulates the heart's action, you know," Jock explained, "Just as the polson goes to stop it; but strychnine's the best; acts as nerve tonic. It's a deal to do with the nerves, this snake bite business."

deal to do with the nerves, this snake bite business."

We heard the little ground ewis hegin whistling to each other from the mouths of the sauiret holes away down in the plain, and the bats and moths began to come out as the sun sank out of sight. They brushed our faces as we continued to march the Mexican to and fro. Presently I left the work to Jock and rigged up a pine torch for a signal light on the pole, which I took from the wagon. The job took some while, but at length I got the light fairly flaring.

while, but at length I got the light fairly, flaring.
"Look at his face," Jock whispered to me as I came back to him, II was a shocking sight under the flickering rays, swollen, distorted, livid. The man's arm was swollen, too, as I felt when I took my place to support him. His movements were lethargic and heavy, so that I wondered that Jock, maided, could have kept him moving so long.

steep.

In the morning he was difficult to rouse, as he might be after so heavy a night, but the doctor said he would doright enough if we would give him a rest for a day or two. And so he did, though his nerve was so shaken that we had to send him back to the plain where there were no rattlesmakes. It appeared later that Louis had cherched a mornial depend of makes for a low with leavy, so that I wondered that Jock, unaided, could have kept him moving so long.

"Give him more brandy." Jock directed, "more; that's 11—he's had nearly all the bottle. There's a chance," however on presently; I really helleve there les. I thought he'd have been dead before now. Maybe he don't mean dying after all. A white man'd have been dend half an hour ago."

"I wish the docto'd come,"
"Mighty little good wishing."

The weary tramp went on. Twice I had to replenish the beacon torch, and once more we gave the Mexican a guin little.
